APRIL is the month for National Victims’ Right Week. This issue of our Stepping Stones newsletter will present information and resources about your rights as a victim of crime in general and in New Mexico.

What is National Victim Rights Week? (WWW.Victimsofcrime.org)

A week established by President Ronald Reagan in 1981 to address needs of victims of crimes.

- The first crime victim program began in 1965 in California.
- The first victim rights week began in Philadelphia, PA in 1975.
- Crime victim reparation fund (VOCA) was established in 1984.
- In 1992, New Mexico was one of 5 states to ratify constitutional amendments for victims’ rights.
- By 2002 all 50 states established crime victim compensation programs

What is violent death and what does our Resource Center do for our clients?

New Mexico is one of 17 states currently participating in the National Violent Death Reporting System with the Center for Disease Control. This reporting system tracks violent deaths, including child maltreatment fatalities, intimate partner homicides, other homicides, suicides, and legal intervention deaths. According to this reporting system New Mexico’s overall violent death rate is one of the highest in the nation. Deaths are classified by manner of death: Natural, accident, homicide, suicide, and undetermined. Our agency provides services and resources to those left behind in the aftermath of violent death – there is no charge for our services.
Do YOU consider yourself a victim or a survivor?

What seems like a simple question has many important facets to its answer. Within victim services providers like, law enforcement offices, DA’s offices, and some support agencies like ours, the Resource Center for Victims of Violent Death, the NM Crime Victims Reparation Commission or the Grief Services Program within the NM Office of the Medical Investigator, these two terms are often used interchangeably. Even within these agencies you might be called a victim, survivor, or family member by anyone at any time. Read your newspaper, iPhone, iPad or watch the news on TV and see how they speak about the victims and the survivors. Joan Shirley, RCVVD Victim Advocate and mother of a murdered son – August 2013

However you call yourself, you have guaranteed rights as a citizen of the United States (Bill of Rights, US Constitution) and these are your rights as a victim of crime in New Mexico.

Laws exist for five basic reasons, and all of them can be abused.

1. The Harm Principle - Laws created under the Harm Principle are written to protect people from being harmed by others. Laws against violent crime and property crime fall into this category. Without basic Harm Principle laws, a society ultimately degenerates into despotism—the rule of the strong and violent over the weak and nonviolent. Harm Principle laws are essential, and every government on Earth has them.

2. The Parental Principle - In addition to laws intended to discourage people from harming each other, some laws are written to prohibit self-harm. Parental Principle laws include compulsory attendance laws for children, laws against neglect of children and vulnerable adults, and laws banning the possession of certain drugs. Some Parental Principle laws are essential to protect children and vulnerable adults, but even in those cases they can be oppressive if they are not narrowly written and sensibly enforced.

3. The Morality Principle - Some laws are based not strictly on harm or self-harm concerns, but also on promoting the personal morality of the law's authors. These laws are usually, but not always, grounded in religious belief. Historically, most of these laws have something to do with sex—but some European laws against Holocaust denial and other forms of hate speech also appear to be motivated primarily by the Morality Principle.

4. The Donation Principle - All governments have laws granting goods or services of some kind to its citizens. When these laws are used to control behavior, however, they can give some people, groups, or organizations unfair advantages over others. Laws promoting specific religious beliefs, for example, are gifts that governments extend to religious groups in hopes of gaining their support. Laws punishing certain corporate practices are sometimes used to reward corporations that are in the government's good graces, and/or to punish corporations that are not.

5. The Statist Principle - The most dangerous laws are those intended to protect the government from harm, or to increase its power for its own sake. Some Statist Principle laws are necessary—laws against treason and espionage, for example, are essential to the stability of government. But Statist Principle laws can also be dangerous—laws restricting criticism of the government, such as flag burning laws that prohibit the desecration of symbols that remind people of the government, can easily lead to a politically oppressive society full of imprisoned dissidents and frightened citizens who are afraid to speak out.
